SUMMARY OF INFORMATION

Site is a man made object which has structure like qualities or aspects in addition to a large hill or mountain. The site is constructed mostly of rock or stone or very heavy large bricks. The temperature of the site is very cold and wet. The elevation of the site varies dramatically just in it's central location.

The site has more variations in texture and dimension than I can describe. There is a structure which has structural dimensions but it is somewhat insignificant relative to the surrounding area. The surrounding area encompasses every dimensional aspect -- overhangs, circles, flat, round, concave and convex with very large circular symmetry positioned linearly to the structure.

The structure seems elevated and strategically positioned for some reason (see sketch page 5 and 6). There are people at the site centered around the structure -- they are very bored with life and their jobs. They push brooms, pickup trash mop floors etc. The same thing day after day -- they hate it!

There are lots of heavy chunks of AOL/S concrete, block or brick all over the place -- I called it rubble. There are heavily striated surfaces that are rough and holed AOL/S like salt on ice. There are steel cables and rusty metal pins and bars in the area. And there are trees all over the place, but they are very scrubby looking.

Relative to the structure there are shadows looming in the background, large and ominous. The shadows are cold and dark with a presence of people there. While looking at this portion of the site I experienced a rapid decompression in my ears -- creating discomfort and ringing.

There are cars and water near the site, as well as elements of glass, wood and metal. The site is beautiful and "artsy" -- very ornate in it's own way, and has an aire of importance to it.

There are four distinctive areas relative to the site labeled A thru D on page 12. Perceptions relative to each in sequence are (A): revolution, tired, cold, hungry and intelligent; (B): hatred, bitterness, war, confusion, brotherhood, violence, sorrow, forgiveness, country, torn and sides; (C): soldier, horses, war, country, bears; (D): silent, enthusiastic, impoverished, seeks attention, recognition, wants to be noted, famous, tired, tired.

The site is significant and historic -- there is great emotion and remembrance attached to the site.
